

Doctoral programme fields of study in the 2018-2019 academic year

Field of study: European Law (6801V044)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: full-time

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year: 0

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 0

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the principles of European law acquired within the master's programme of study, including theoretical background of the field, as well as to gain more profound expertise regarding relations between European law and a variety of branches of domestic law. In the framework of exams and particularly of defence of a dissertation thesis, a graduate must demonstrate competence for independent scholarly work and follow-up application practice at an above-standard language competence in the main working languages of the European Union, be it English, French, or German.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

A graduate will have profound knowledge of theoretical foundations of and methods used in legal science, as well as expertise in the field of European law (with potential links to international law and constitutional law). A graduate will be able to work as a researcher or an academic in the field of European law; he/she will also be able to perform demanding legal and analytical activities in bodies and institutions of the European Union, as well as in central bodies of public administration or the judiciary.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. PhDr. Michal Tomášek, DrSc., Head of Department, Tomasekm@prf.cuni.cz

Contact persons:

Prof. JUDr. Richard Král, Ph.D. LL.M., Kral@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Prof. JUDr. Richard Král, Ph.D. LL.M., Kral@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. Mag. phil. Dr.iur. Harald Christian Scheu, Ph.D., Scheu@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Václav Šmejkal, Ph.D., Smejkalv@prf.cuni.cz

Doc JUDr. Lenka Pítrová, CSc., Litrova@prf.cuni.cz

Field of study: European Law (6801V044)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: combined

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year:

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 0

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the principles of European law acquired within the master's programme of study, including theoretical background of the field, as well as to gain more profound expertise regarding relations between European law and a variety of branches of domestic law. In the framework of exams and particularly of defence of a dissertation thesis, a graduate must demonstrate competence for independent scholarly work and follow-up application practice at an above-standard language competence in the main working languages of the European Union, be it English, French, or German.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

A graduate will have profound knowledge of theoretical foundations of and methods used in legal science and expertise in the field of European law (with potential links to international law and constitutional law). A graduate will be able to work as a researcher or an academic in the field of European law; he/she will also be able to perform demanding legal and analytical activities in bodies and institutions of the European Union, as well as in central bodies of public administration or the judiciary.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. PhDr. Michal Tomášek, DrSc., Head of Department, Tomasekm@prf.cuni.cz

Contact persons:

Prof. JUDr. Richard Král, Ph.D. LL.M., Kral@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Prof. JUDr. Richard Král, Ph.D. LL.M., Kral@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. Mag. phil. Dr.iur. Harald Christian Scheu, Ph.D., Scheu@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Václav Šmejkal, Ph.D., Smejkalv@prf.cuni.cz

Doc JUDr. Lenka Pítrová, CSc., Litrova@prf.cuni.cz

Field of study: International Law (6801V008)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: full-time

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year: 0

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 5

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the principles of international law acquired within the master's programme of study, including theoretical background of the field, as well as to gain more profound expertise in one of the branches of public international law. In the framework of exams and particularly of defence of a dissertation thesis, a graduate must demonstrate competence for independent scholarly work.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

A graduate from the field of study will have profound knowledge of theoretical foundations of and methods used in legal science and expertise in the field of public international law (with potential interdisciplinary links to constitutional law and European law). A graduate will be able to work as a researcher or an academic in the given field; he/she will also be able to perform demanding legal and analytical activities at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and at departments of international law and international relations of other central bodies, as well as in international governmental and non-governmental organisations.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. Pavel Šturma, DrSc., Head of Department, Sturma@prf.cuni.cz

Contact person:

Doc. JUDr. PhDr. Veronika Bílková, Ph.D., E.MA., Bilkova@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Doc. JUDr. Vladimír Balaš, CSc., Balas@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. PhDr. Veronika Bílková, Ph.D., E.MA., Bilkova@prf.cuni.cz

Prof. JUDr. Mahulena Hofmannová, CSc., Hofmannm@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Jan Ondřej, CSc., DSc., Ondrej@prf.cuni.cz

Prof. JUDr. Pavel Šturma, DrSc., Sturma@prf.cuni.cz

Field of study: International Law (6801V008)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: combined

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year: 0

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 1

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the principles of international law acquired within the master's programme of study, including theoretical background of the field, as well as to gain more profound expertise in one of the branches of public international law. In the framework of exams and particularly of defence of a dissertation thesis, a graduate must demonstrate competence for independent scholarly work.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

A graduate from the field of study will have profound knowledge of theoretical foundations of and methods used in legal science and expertise in the field of public international law (with potential interdisciplinary links to constitutional law and European law). A graduate will be able to work as a researcher or an academic in the given field; he/she will also be able to perform demanding legal and analytical activities at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and at departments of international law and international relations of other central bodies, as well as in international governmental and non-governmental organisations.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. Pavel Šturma, DrSc., Head of Department, Sturma@prf.cuni.cz

Contact person:

Doc. JUDr. PhDr. Veronika Bílková, Ph.D., E.MA., Bilkova@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Doc. JUDr. Vladimír Balaš, CSc., Balas@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. PhDr. Veronika Bílková, Ph.D., E.MA., Bilkova@prf.cuni.cz

Prof. JUDr. Mahulena Hofmannová, CSc., Hofmannm@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Jan Ondřej, CSc., DSc., Ondrej@prf.cuni.cz

Prof. JUDr. Pavel Šturma, DrSc., Sturma@prf.cuni.cz

Field of study: Environmental Law (6801V021)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: full-time

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year: 0

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 0

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the theoretical principles of environmental law through studying both environmental issues and related theoretical public law issues as general background of the field. At the same time, study should help a doctoral student to get better oriented in a rather flexible field, which environmental law undoubtedly is (given the frequency of legislative amendments). What constitutes the basis of the field is understanding of systems of international law, European Community law, and Czech national law with the possibility of using theoretical and practical knowledge from the field of legal comparison. The acquired theoretical knowledge should serve as a basis for dealing with particular issues selected as the topic of the dissertation thesis. The dissertation should focus on theoretical legal issues and their possible application in follow-up practice.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

The field of study should shape a graduate as someone with profound knowledge of the selected issues and with theoretical background mainly in the field of environmental law. What should also be a part of the profile of a graduate from the field of study is the capability of independent creative activity in the field of environmental law, as well as the ability to apply theoretical specialised knowledge in practice.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. Milan Damohorský, DrSc., Head of the Department, damohors@prf.cuni.cz

Contact Person:

JUDr. Michal Sobotka, Ph.D., Sobotka@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Prof. JUDr. Milan Damohorský, DrSc., damohors@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Vojtěch Stejskal, DrSc., stejskal@prf.cuni.cz

Field of study: Environmental Law (6801V021)

Programme of study: Theoretical Legal Sciences (P6801)

Form of study: combined

Type of programme of study: doctoral

Number of admitted students in the previous academic year: 0

Number of applicants in the previous academic year: 0

Minimum number of admitted students:

Maximum number of admitted students:

Standard length of study: 3 years

Short note:

Parallel study in English:

Fee for study in English: CZK 130,000

Form of application: electronic, paper

Admission without the entrance examination:

Field specification

The aim of the field of study is to deepen knowledge of the theoretical principles of environmental law through studying both environmental issues and related theoretical public law issues as general background of the field. At the same time, study should help a doctoral student to get better oriented in a rather flexible field, which environmental law undoubtedly is (given the frequency of legislative amendments). What constitutes the basis of the field is understanding of systems of international law, European Community law, and Czech national law with the possibility of using theoretical and practical knowledge from the field of legal comparison. The acquired theoretical knowledge should serve as a basis for dealing with particular issues selected as the topic of the dissertation thesis. The dissertation should focus on theoretical legal issues and their possible application in follow-up practice.

Description of entrance examination and assessment criteria

The entrance examination is oral and consists of one round. It is taken in either the Czech language or Slovak language; in the case of study in English, the exam is taken in the English language. The exam tests primarily the relevant knowledge and readiness of the applicant for independent scholarly work in the chosen field.

The maximum amount of 60 points may be obtained in the entrance examination. The total number of points obtained by an applicant consists of aggregating scores in individual parts of the entrance examination. The points are distributed among individual parts of the entrance examination as follows: a professional discourse on the presented topic of the dissertation project (0-25 points); evaluation of previous professional activity (0-10 points); proving one's knowledge acquired by reading professional literature and knowledge of the respective field in the extent required for the State Final Examination, or, in case of fields that are not subject to the State Final Examination, knowledge in the extent of an advancement examination (0-25 points).

An applicant who obtains at least 40 points in the entrance examination may be admitted to study. The maximum number of applicants admitted to full-time study is determined by decision of the Dean.

After the results have been published in the Electronic System, the Faculty of Law will send a decision on non-admission to study to all unsuccessful applicants via a registered letter that is to be delivered to the addressee in person only. If the applicant consents thereto in his/her application, the decision on admission to study may also be delivered through the Electronic System.

If an applicant satisfies the requirements for admission to study, the Dean will issue a decision on the admission to study within thirty days of the verification of fulfilment of the requirements for admission to study. This decision is delivered through the University Electronic System, provided that the applicant has consented thereto in advance in his/her application.

Information about employability of graduates

The field of study should shape a graduate as someone with profound knowledge of the selected issues and with theoretical background mainly in the field of environmental law. What should also be a part of the profile of a graduate from the field of study is the capability of independent creative activity in the field of environmental law, as well as the ability to apply theoretical specialised knowledge in practice.

Guarantor:

Prof. JUDr. Milan Damohorský, DrSc., Head of the Department, damohors@prf.cuni.cz

Contact Person:

JUDr. Michal Sobotka, Ph.D., Sobotka@prf.cuni.cz

Supervisors:

Prof. JUDr. Milan Damohorský, DrSc., damohors@prf.cuni.cz

Doc. JUDr. Vojtěch Stejskal, DrSc., stejskal@prf.cuni.cz